Mini-Bio:

Thomas McArthur Anderson (1836-1917), army officer. Born on January 21, 1836, near Chillicothe, Ohio, Anderson graduated from St. Mary's College, Maryland, in 1855 and three years later from the Cincinnati Law School, whereupon he was admitted to the bar and entered practice in Cincinnati. In April, 1861 he enlisted as a private in the 6th Ohio Volunteers; a short time later, through the influence of his uncle, Gen. Robert Anderson of Fort Sumter fame, he was commissioned second lieutenant of the 5th Cavalry (regulars). Soon promoted to captain, he served through the Civil War with the 12th Infantry, being twice wounded and twice brevetted, to major for his conduct in the Wilderness and to lieutenant colonel for Spotsylvania Court House. After the war he remained in the army, rising to colonel commanding the 14th Infantry. In 1898, with temporary rank of brigadier general, he commanded the first troops to reach the Philippines after Adm. George Dewey's victory in Manila Bay. Arriving on July 17 with some 2000 men, he occupied Cavite, the vital naval base in the bay, and on August 13, when the U.S. ground forces had grown to about 15,000, constituting Gen. Wesley Merritt's VIII Corp, Anderson led the first of them into the city of Manila. In command of the 1st Division he saw action in the battles of Santana, San Pedro, Passe, and Guadalupe in the early months of the Philippine Insurrection. Promoted to brigadier general
